

J.W. Mollohan, FCSI

*“For your dedication and commitment to continually educate, encourage and elevate your professional peers at the Chapter, Region, and Institute level; for your outstanding leadership and support of new members through mentoring and recognition; for your constant ability to recognize opportunities; for your vision to see solutions for the betterment of your Chapter and Region; and for your service to the Institute, you are advanced to Fellowship in the Institute on the 14th day of September 2017.”
Providence, Rhode Island*

J.W. MOLLOHAN loves to meet new people. He derives energy from others; taking great pleasure in being of service. He is grateful to CSI for providing an opportunity to do all three.

J.W. grew up in rural West Virginia, joining the Army the day he graduated from high school. After his military service, J.W. enrolled in architectural and engineering courses at San Diego State University. Turns out being an architect is not entirely joyful. His eclectic education proceeded from there to interesting courses on many fascinating subjects at multiple colleges and universities, but primarily from his voracious appetite for reading.

J.W. found his joy in building things. Carpenter, cabinetmaker, artist, and business owner, J.W. works for the pleasure of creating objects from ideas.

However, joy comes in many forms. Keeping up with his beautiful bride Debra, and their two amazing children, focused J.W.'s efforts on a higher purpose.

J.W. has served in every step of bringing high-performance building products to the commercial construction project market, from manufacturing to installation, as:

Vice President, Universal Building Specialties, Lakeland, Florida

Southeast, Midwest, and Mountain Regions Manager, G-P Gypsum, Atlanta, Georgia

Strategic Accounts & Special Projects Manager, Dryvit Systems, West Warwick, Rhode Island

At every step of his career, J.W. has been the beneficiary of his association with the professionals of CSI. Accredited as a Certified Construction Product Representative, an EIFS Certified Professional, and a LEED Green Associate, J.W. has provided service to designers, specifiers, builders, and owners nationwide for more than two decades.
