

Floyd B. Sterling, Jr., FCSI

“For your faithful and continuous voice and embodiment of CSI over many years as the main mast for the stability and continuity of the Shreveport Chapter; for your outstanding leadership in education to the Gulf States Region in establishing student scholarship funds; for developing a course at Louisiana Tech University to show how contractors use construction documents; and for providing “real life” applications as a construction estimating instructor at Bossier Community College, you are advanced to Fellowship in the Institute on the 30th day of September 2015.”
St. Louis, Missouri

Born and raised in Springhill, Louisiana, FLOYD B STERLING, SR., attended Louisiana Tech University where he obtained a BS degree in Construction Engineering technology in 1979.

Floyd’s career paths have taken him to work as a field engineer for a pipeline company in Lafayette, Louisiana, as an estimator for a Shreveport general contractor, a CQC Representative on a project in Hooks, Texas, back to Shreveport as an estimator for another general contractor and finally leading up to his current position as Senior Estimator at Shreve Land Constructors where he has worked for the past 18 years.

Floyd joined the Shreveport Chapter CSI in 1986. It was during his second year while serving as chapter membership chair, he attended his first Gulf States Region Leadership meeting. That is when he really became passionate about CSI. He served as Chapter President in 1992 and since that time he has either served on the board or held a chair position, including serving as Chapter President on two more occasions.

In the Gulf States Region he has held several committee chair positions, served as Region Treasurer for a two year term, and later was the first Region President under CSI’s new governance structure. While serving as the region Student Academic Affairs chair he got board approval to begin a region scholarship fund and presented the first award at the GSR Annual meeting in Shreveport in April 2011. He has also had the honor of serving the members on the Institute’s Education Committee, Membership Committee and on the Institute Board as director from the Gulf States Region.

Floyd feels very strongly about what CSI has to offer. He has benefitted greatly from the networking and educational aspects that CSI has had to offer. Having been inspired and taught by some truly remarkable people he has met over the years in CSI, many of whom he has become very close to, it has been a privilege and honor for him to have “paid it forward” and share these experiences and knowledge to those who have followed. CSI has taught him how to be a better leader in his career and in his life. But mostly, Floyd truly feels that he is a better person because of his CSI experience.

Floyd and his wife Gaye are the proud parents of two children and five grandchildren. He is an outdoor enthusiast and enjoys hunting, fishing, and camping.
